After completion the user gets the same page with the form. But the form contains fields that contain user's input (such as telephone number). I'd like to prevent the data of one form from being edited in the next one. Or at least only show the first value in the database. How do I do this? A: Create a custom input field for the user to input the field's name for example: Create a custom validation process for the field's value. If the validation fails, show the input without the field/value. You can have it run every time, however, if you just want to have it do it on POST, create a hidden field and have it run whenever the form is submitted.
