In most cases, the shift in pitch is a chance of several measures long. If in an elite player the passage from one pitch to another is stated precisely by half-steps, in this tool there is no such need. The tempo stays unchanged, the time signature is not corrected and the frequency remains at the same level. The program itself is one window, the playlist creation is another window. The important part here is how you can point the player to the playlist. It's done in four different ways, you can move from the central one and you will get a window with the desired tracks. First button, move the play to The second button allows to choose from a playlist file, you can also import the list from the computer or it can be sent from the web. Both the list and the playlist can have several columns. A column specifies the position and instrument, a column specifies the list of present songs, and the remaining columns are for the songs. The second window contains this playlist which you want to use. The length of the lines is double the length of the song duration in real life. You can move from one song to another with the help of buttons. For example, the number "3" allows to go directly to the third song in the list. A child window with the same playlist is at the bottom. Is a free application but it can be cracked. ConvertX Codec Tools offers you several video and audio format converters in one package.
