The traditional method of opening a file and working on it is based on layers and structure, so knowing the traditional file format is an important part of understanding the new file format that Photoshop uses, the TIFF (Tagged Image File Format) file type. Q: Best way to mimic asp.net login for iPhone SDK? I'm currently building an app which requires an authentication mechanism, and am aware of the use of the OpenID for my website, however OpenID is not available to iPhone apps on the app store at the moment. I have also seen that there are various third party libraries and libraries which may be able to fill the gap and mimic the functionality of the asp.net login control on the website, however I am not entirely sure whether they will work as the same would require the user to have a login ID and password supplied by the app on his iPhone. Is there any other way I can provide the same functions that the asp.net login control has, or is the only way to fill the gap using the OpenID protocol for my app, or are there any other security mechanisms that could be used instead of OpenID? A: I believe an app that doesn't require a username and password would be possible, and it might be available on the App Store. If I remember correctly there was also an example app on the iTunes Dev site that implemented the login system I believe. I think it wouldn't be feasible for an app to automatically do what an ASP.NET login system does, and I'm sure you will be implementing additional authentication layers. # Changelog All notable changes to this project will be documented in this file.
